

Career Seminar Announcement

"This event is designed to provide practical and strategic advice to foreign students who plan to pursue a career or graduate study in Japan and to Japanese students who would like to work for Multinational firms. Each of the speakers has followed their own path to successful careers in Japan and will offer their advice about the current job market and which strategies are most likely to lead to success. After their presentation, the speakers will remain for a networking period in which students may exchange meishi and ask questions in a more informal environment".

-- Mark Tracy, Executive Director Asian Studies Program

Jeremy Goldstrich

Jeremy Goldstrich is a Kansai Gaidai alumnus who started his career in Japan with FedEx in 1999. He has been climbing the internal career ladder steadily ever since then and is now the Managing Director for Ground Operations for all of Japan. Jeremy specializes in Cross-cultural leadership and his experience in working in an international company in Japan should be valuable for anyone looking to a career in Japan.

Paul Hintgen

Paul Hintgen is a Gaidai alumnus who challenged the Japanese job market head on! He enrolled at a Japanese university and chose to compete with hundreds of thousands of Japanese graduates for a position in a Japanese company. He is currently the National Sales & Marketing Manager at Schindler Japan. If you are looking for someone with in depth experience when it comes to searching for a job in Japan as a young graduate, look no further than Paul Hintgen.

Paul Levine

Paul Levine has been working in Japan since 1985 and is now a grizzled veteran of the scene. He started his current company, a recruitment company called PAL Associates in 2010. They currently employ 30 staff but are looking to double that number over the next 18 months. If you are interested in the recruiting business and are looking for opportunities to work in the field, do not miss Paul Levine.
