Course Description

This course offers a comparative perspective on Asian regionalism and its role in global order. Case studies are drawn from Southeast Asia, Northeast Asia, Central Asia and South Asia. Specifically, this course addresses the nature, functional principles, leadership and policy making process of Asian regionalism. It will also introduce and assess the origins and developments of leading regional cooperation mechanisms: ASEAN, Six-Party Talks (Northeast Asian Security Cooperation Architecture), SAARC and SCO. The second part of the course will focus on the key factors that influence growth and development in Asian economies.

Learning Objectives

By the end of this course, students will be able to:

Understand the concepts and principles of Asian Regionalism

Understand the origins and development of leading regional co-operations in Asia like ASEAN, SAARC and CAREC Understand the key drivers of Asian economic growth and development issues in Asia

Readings:

Students for this course are NOT required to purchase any textbooks. Weekly readings from the main textbooks and articles from academic journals will be posted on blackboard.

Main textbook

Regionalism in World Politics by Louise Fawcett and Andrew Hurrell, Oxford University Press, 2000.

Course structure

Classes will consist of lectures, discussions and group activities

Important: It is crucial that students do the readings before coming to class in order to be able to participate actively during discussions. The readings are also intended to provide students with ideas and arguments for written assignments.

 $\ensuremath{\textbf{Exams:}}$ There will be one mid-term and one final exam

Group work & writing assignments:

After every group work session, each student is required to write a short essay. There will be 4 short essays and each consists of 10 points. In total, ALL the writing assignments are worth 40% of your grade. The 4 short essays are based on the various topics that we will be discussing in class. The essays are about 1-2 pages in length and have to be typed (12 font, double spaced) and turned in during the designated day and time.

Evaluation criteria:

Attendance & Participation 20 % Written assignment 40% Midterm 20% Final exam 20%

Class etiquette

- Be aware that not everyone in the class shares the same political or other views—and that these views do tend to emerge in Political Science classes. Please be respectful of your classmates and professor.
- Cellphone use during class is disrespectful, and thus strictly prohibited (voice or text).
- You may use a laptop in class, but ONLY for valid class-related reasons.
- Kindly be on time and please avoid entering the classroom once lecture has started.
