Course Outline / Description

This course is designed for students who are interested in international politics and security in East Asia. The course begins by examining the history and politics of the states in the region and how they shape and influence security issues. It attempts to understand the source of states behaviour and prospects for regional stability and instability. Particular attention will be given to the US alliance system in the region, China's military rise, Japanese militarization, politics and security capabilities of North and South Korea as well as Myanmar, Vietnam and the Philippines in Southeast Asia. The course also includes other topics such as insurgency and transnational terrorism, territorial disputes, the Taiwan issue, arms races, maritime security, energy security, transnational crime and multilateral security cooperation. In addition, this course also considers some implications for Australian policy towards the region.

Course structure

Classes will consist of lectures, discussions, group activities and presentations.

*Important: It is crucial that students do the readings before coming to class in order to be able to participate actively during discussions. The readings are also intended to provide students with ideas for written assignments.

Exams: There will be one mid-term and one final exam

Group work & writing assignments:

After every group work session, each student is required to write a short essay. There will be 4 short essays and each consists of 5 points. In total, ALL the writing assignments are worth 20% of your grade. The 4 short essays are based on the various topics that we will be discussing in class. The essays are about 1-2 pages in length and have to be typed (12 font, double spaced) and turned in during the designated day and time.

Quizzes: There will be 4 quizzes in total for this class.
